Speech (Approx. 2 minutes)

Good afternoon, Council members. My name is Rev. Dr. Christina Clement, President of the State of Loc Nation Global Public Benefit Corporation.

When the pyramid was placed on the U.S. dollar, it was not decoration — it was a covenant of enduring government. Today, under Charter § 1-102, I stand before you as the donor of the Loc Nation Dollar, pegged at $750 each, with the authority to impose the terms and conditions that our people have been denied for over 400 years.

This resolution is not just a donation — it is a Restitution Constitution. It answers every historic complaint:

- Land and housing denied after emancipation.
- Benefits stripped under the GI Bill and redlining.
- Families broken by incarceration and poverty.
- Lives shortened by poor health and toxic neighborhoods.

Under this covenant, Atlanta will lead the nation:

- Building a 19-acre Restitution Headquarters in East Point.
- Hiring 300,000 unemployed residents into real jobs.
- Creating schools that teach authentic Black history, coding, and innovation.
- Protecting our homeless with psychologists, transition homes, and care.
- Enforcing housing standards so no landlord profits from misery.
- Establishing a Restitution Defense Corps with full benefits equal to U.S. service members.
- And protecting our children's God-given talents from exploitation, so the next Michael Jackson or Whitney Houston is safeguarded from birth.

This is not symbolic. It is enforceable — with SOLN as trustee, Council as partner, and every department accountable. Atlanta can be the pilot city that shows the world what restitution looks like in law, in policy, and in action.

Council members, the time is overdue. Accept this donation. Accept these terms. Let Atlanta stand as the first city in America to move from promises to performance.

Thank you.

Public Comment – Atlanta City Council

[Opening – Pyramid & Covenant]
"Good afternoon. I am Rev. Dr. Christina Clement, President of the State of Loc Nation Global Public Benefit Corporation — federally filed and internationally noticed.

When the pyramid was placed on the dollar, it was more than a design. It was a covenant, a promise of a government meant to endure and to deliver justice. But that pyramid was left unfinished, that promise unfulfilled."

[The Moral – The Lesson for Us Today]
"As Dr. King said, 'America has given its colored people a check which has come back marked insufficient funds.' And as Malcolm X reminded us, 'We're not outnumbered, we're out-organized.'

The State of Loc Nation is the building of that missing room — the fulfillment of what was denied, the completion of what was left undone.

The moral of the story is this: unfinished justice is no justice at all. A covenant ignored is a covenant broken. But when leaders rise to finish the work, the people are restored.

We are not here to beg for drops of water while others build dams upstream. We are here to open the gates. We are not here to tear down the house. We are here to finish it — brick by brick, stone by stone — until the blessings of liberty flow to all."

[The Living Moral – Donation as Action]
"And so today, we don't just bring words. We bring action.

Through the Loc Nation Dollar — our covenant currency — we are making a donation equal to half of the City of Atlanta's 2025 budget. This is for the underfunded communities who have waited too long outside the walls.

This is not charity. This is restitution. This is not a favor. This is justice delayed, delivered at last.

Where Dr. King dreamed, where Malcolm demanded — we now act. And I say to you: the unfinished pyramid can be completed — not by promises alone, but by deeds. The time is overdue. The time is now."

[Closing – The Lane Out]
"We have lawfully tendered. The judge refused under color of law. Congress is now on notice.

Atlanta, you are the civil rights capital. History is watching. Either you lead, or you stand exposed in the record as complicit in corruption.

The choice is yours. Let Atlanta be the city that finishes what history began."

Option 3

[Intro — You / SOLN]
"Good afternoon. My name is Rev. Dr. Christina Clement, President of the State of Loc Nation Global Public Benefit Corporation.

When the pyramid was placed on the dollar, it was not decoration — it was a covenant. A covenant of government meant to endure, to protect, and to complete what was left unfinished.

I stand before you today as President of that government, the State of Loc Nation, fulfilling that covenant through the Loc Nation Dollar — not a theory, but a living currency pegged at $750 USD, backed by law, and born from the principle of restitution."

"Today, as the Council of Atlanta, we recognize that accepting the Loc Nation Dollar is more than a financial act — it is a moral act.

When we receive LND, we do not simply adjust ledgers. We restore schools. We open clinics. We invest in neighborhoods once left behind.

Atlanta has always been the birthplace of movements that changed the course of this nation. From the steps of Auburn Avenue to the march across Selma, this city has never shied away from justice.

Now, by recognizing and receiving the Loc Nation Dollar, we proclaim that restitution is no longer a dream deferred, but a covenant fulfilled."

[Closing — Call to Action]
"And so I call on you today: let Atlanta lead once again. Let this council be the first to say, 'Restitution begins here.'

On September 15, you have the power to make history not in theory, but in action. To open the doors of this chamber to equity, to justice, and to the future.

Not charity. Covenant. Not delay. Decision.

The world I described — a world where restitution is real, where the unfinished pyramid is finally complete — begins with your 'yes.'

Atlanta, the blueprint starts here."

  Money flowed into rebuilding Southern infrastructure, but not into Black family foundations of wealth.

1930s–1940s: New Deal & WWII Programs

- Social Security Act (1935): Excluded agricultural and domestic workers (jobs held mostly by Black workers).
- GI Bill (1944): Promised housing, education, and loans for veterans.
  - In practice, Black veterans were often denied benefits by local banks, colleges, and housing boards.

  White families built intergenerational wealth through housing & education; Black families were largely locked out.

1950s–1960s: Civil Rights Era

• Urban Renewal ("Negro Removal"): Federal funds for housing redevelopment often displaced Black communities (e.g., highways through Black neighborhoods).
• Philanthropy: Big foundations (Rockefeller, Ford, Carnegie) funded universities, medical research, and global development — but rarely funded grassroots Black-led community programs.

Cities got new buildings; Black residents often lost homes.

1970s–1990s: War on Poverty & War on Drugs

• War on Poverty (1960s–70s): Federal anti-poverty programs existed, but were bureaucratic and often co-opted by local elites.
• War on Drugs (1980s–90s): Federal and state money funded policing and prisons, not community development.

Billions flowed into prisons instead of schools or housing.

2000s–Present: Foundations & Corporate Social Responsibility

• Large foundations fund STEM education, climate, and global health, but very little into housing justice, or restitution for slavery/redlining.
• Studies show Black-led nonprofits receive 76% less unrestricted funding than white-led nonprofits with similar missions.

Black communities remain underfunded; visible effects include higher homelessness, health disparities, and lack of generational wealth.

Summary

At every stage:

• Reconstruction dismantled.
• New Deal excluded Black labor.
• GI Bill denied benefits to Black veterans.
• Urban Renewal displaced Black neighborhoods.
• War on Poverty underfunded; War on Drugs overfunded.
• Philanthropy supported institutions, not Black grassroots movements.

Hypothetically, this is why today you "only see Black homelessness" — because targeted, binding investments into Black people themselves never materialized.
